A partnership of

Door County Food Pantry Coalition

The food pantries of Door County, working in partnership with United Way and the Door County Community Foundation, have created the Door County Food Pantry Coalition. It's our community's coordinated, sustainable response to providing food and other supplies to people who are struggling during the global pandemic and economic recession.

While everyone is working together through the Coalition, each food pantry operates in a different way. Some pantries are only able to provide non-perishable items, while others can offer refrigerated and frozen foods. A few pantries also make toiletries and other household supplies available. In some cases, the pantries allow you to come into their facility to pick out what you need. Others take your "order" for what you need then bring it outside to you.

There is no qualification process to access the pantries during this health crisis. If you're having a hard time making ends meet, the members of the Food Pantry Coalition want to extend a helping hand.

Visit www.FeedDoorCounty.org to connect with the Food Pantry that can best serve you.
